Chandra is unhappy to be in a fixed engagement, but Prem is unwilling to break it as he does not wish to end the relationship. On the day of their wedding, she is forced to marry her friend. As Prem is known in the community for being a man who always helps the needy, he calls everyone to come to help Chandra. During this time, they realise they are in love and Prem reveals that he was looking for a way to get out of the engagement so they can live together. Story Prem and Chandni had known each other since school, but had never had any sort of romantic interest in each other. When Prem was in grade 8, he had lost his parents.

While he was visiting the funeral of his father, Chandni had come to ask Prem what he thought about getting engaged. According to Prem, her brother and his friend had proposed to her, she had accepted and the wedding was scheduled for a few days later. Her brother had promised to look for Prem when he came to visit his hometown for the wedding. Prem had agreed, hoping that he would be able to live in Chandni's house and that they would be together. Chandni was in love with Prem, but was in a difficult financial situation. The only family she had was her brother, who was a widower. Prem overheard this conversation and decided to help her. When he returned home, he was told that he was being sent to become a sarpanch (village head). He decided to marry Chandni and asked for the hand of his friend's sister, Chandni's friend, who was eight years younger than her. Prem and Chandni agreed to get married, but wanted to get married in three weeks, as her brother had promised to come to take her with him. Chandni was forced to accept Prem's proposal because of her financial situation. Prem was a chowkidar, who protected his house. He was the first to help his friends, whether it was eating or drinking, and always called everyone to help them. Everyone loved him because of his nature. But no one knew that Prem was in love with Chandni. He loved her from the day he found out about her problem. They had known each other for years, but when they met for the first time, they were immediately attracted to each other. Prem was feeling alone, but when he found out that Chandni was in love with him, he was relieved. However, Prem was also scared of marrying. 82157476af
